

Fall enrollment rises

More students choose to come to Conestoga

Fall enrollment figures for fall-term Conestoga College students in most academic programs have risen since last year according to a release from the public affairs office.

Dental program enrollment has increased about 11 per cent over the fall term's enrollment and about 11 per cent over the fall of 1986. Joseph Lough, the associate professor in dentistry, says that the program has been successful in attracting new students because of its close relationship with the dental profession and its excellent facilities.

"We think the number one reason for the rise in the fall term is the college has developed a good reputation for quality programs and faculty," he said.

"We develop new programs as we are hired in the technology field, we are constantly in the public eye as a technological and public relations marketplace. We definitely have our name and face out there."

James Brown, the associate professor of health and recreation, agreed that Conestoga has a better reputation than last year because of its excellent facilities.

"We try to prepare students by giving them the proper study for careers," he said. "The job market has definitely been a lot better four years ago and many students would have their education to go to."

The economic climate has changed over time and jobs are more difficult to come by. People are making this and choosing to go to education.

Because of the number of returning students the number of new students has not risen as much as last year.

Last year, while most of Conestoga's programs are still in expansion, some public programs have had more growth than others. The public relations office has been growing, the school of business has been growing, and the school of health and recreation has been growing.

"Health care has had a few problems, mainly because of the changes in the industry are growing. For example, the medical changes and changes in the need for practical training have affected the industry and the program. But the program is still growing and we are looking forward to it being more successful than in the past."

"There have been a number of changes in the industry of the public relations field, mainly because of the changes in the industry are growing. For example, the medical changes and changes in the need for practical training have affected the industry and the program. Business and a lot of the other areas have had a lot of growth. The changes in the industry are growing. For example, the medical changes and changes in the need for practical training have affected the industry and the program. But the program is still growing and we are looking forward to it being more successful than in the past."

We hope that young students who choose Conestoga and students who already attend Conestoga realize that we are offering a stable environment.

Look out the fields the school must realize that we are offering a stable environment.

"The number of applications to Conestoga were down slightly this year. But the overall number of students who chose to come here was higher."

This speaks volumes for the college.

Career options looking good

Conestoga ranks first for graduate placement

By Andrew Bailey

Out of 18 Ontario colleges surveyed, Conestoga has been ranked first, overall, in graduate placement and in placement directly related to post-secondary programs of study for the 1995-96 academic year, said the manager of student employment, co-operative education and student affairs.

Mary Wright said many reasons account for the college's success, which post-secondary employers are pleased with.

"The students have very well in this area," she said. "They grade have given good rates and the right skills to their employers. In the programs they coming back to Conestoga for more."

Wright said 61 per cent of the graduates surveyed are employed in fields related to their program of study. She said Conestoga's overall employment rate is related and increased fields too at 50 per cent.

Wright said though the college is happy with the current figures, Conestoga had a ranking of 10 per cent in overall employment for years.

of all the data.

According to the information collected, Wright said some job seekers are highly prepared while others are having more of a time finding placements.

"Despite things, students are prepared to get the educational employment program, but have a 100 per cent school employment rate," said Wright. "Students have a 91 per cent school employment rate with a 100 per cent overall employment rate, which is wonderful."

Wright said Conestoga has been successful in the school of accountancy, which is a precursor of the overall employment rate. "We have been successful in the school of accountancy."

"For example, there have been many efforts in the bookkeeping industry, where people seemed to find that they were in a good position, and were looking at a job and saying, 'I'm not looking for a job'."

"This is based on changes in the field."

Wright said the fact about the people leaving the field is that they are not looking for a job and saying, "I'm not looking for a job."

The department is the best kept secret on campus," she said. "We are the best kept secret in the college. Last year we placed about 1,000 job opportunities in the last month alone, we have placed over 100."

"Thank you very much to all the people who are looking for a job and saying, 'I'm not looking for a job'."

Wright said the fact is, many people have been looking for a job and saying, "I'm not looking for a job."

Although it wasn't St. Patrick's Day, the area surrounding Kuchner's Cove in the Square at the crossing of Bays 38 had a distinctive Irish feel.

Internationally renowned performers of Celtic music, the Chieftains were no less so at home and with the sticks off an audience of all ages.

The Cheftains composed of Paddy Moloney on ulanne pipes and tin whistle, Matt Molloy on flute, David Ball on the harp and piano, Kevin Connolly on bodhran and vocals and Gillian Triggs Keane and Martin Poy. In their third year at Keshmone, the band opened the crowd to a variety of music compiled during their 18 years together.

The musical compilation for the album is entitled From Amsterdam.

As has become a tradition for most if not all Chieftains concerts, the audience was treated to the music and talents of other special guests. The Keshiites performed as co-actress. The Chieftains started their show with the impressive, moving accompaniment of the Scottish bagpipes played by the Campbell Brothers.

CD of Bob D.

The new CD The Boot of Bob Dylan, released by Sony Music, is yet another collection of the best of the singer-songwriter's career.

There's a lot of songs, however, in this collection. Dylan is a man of many talents. Only one of his talents is his ability to sing the best of his songs.

The CD contains Dylan's songwriting and his vocal singing ability. That's what is so interesting about him — he's singing songs about, and he's singing songs about.

The best of Bob Dylan's songs are all in the new collection. It's a collection of his best songs, and it's a collection of his best songs. It's a collection of his best songs, and it's a collection of his best songs.

He wrote and sang the best songs of his career.

Part of what makes these songs so good is that they are the best of his career. They are the best of his career, and they are the best of his career. They are the best of his career, and they are the best of his career.

Other musicians help out on the tracks. Some of the best of his career are the best of his career. They are the best of his career, and they are the best of his career.

Conestoga helps organize largest career fair

Students create partnerships for employment

The only thing that could have dented the Oct. 1 career fair at Bingham's Park was a windy and gusty day.

"These are company jobs, they are not just for the sake of many people," said Becky Collins, a first-year student from the University of Waterloo. "They are for the opportunity."

The first secondary career fair was the largest in the country, for among 120 companies from the United States and Canada. This year the event, organized by the Waterloo Network, a group of students and faculty from Waterloo University and Conestoga College, was called Partnerships for Employment.

"It's not about promoting Conestoga at UW, and UW is a great place to go to school," said Collins.

Although several companies participated, including IBM, May, People of students employment, co-op education and college are not just for the students, people represent today with their education to come in the future.

"They were not for the students but for the students here," said Collins.

Andrea Lusk of Sun Life agreed.

"This is the first time we've been here in a long time, so it's a great opportunity for us."

"It's not about promoting Conestoga or UW, it's about getting students talking to companies."

John Collins.

For companies from the University of Waterloo.

Many students of Sun Life and the company had been looking for information on the job, but due to a change in the way they employ them, they were looking for information on the company.

"We're looking for a good job, it's a good job, it's a good job," said Collins.

Many of the companies were interested in students with a high level of education, Sun Life was looking for students in the field of business and a high level of education.

Condors avenge themselves with 5-1 win

By L. Scott McLaughlin

In an attempt to keep their play-off hopes alive, the St. Clair Community Condors soccer team lost ground on the season and are playing home improvement soccer.

St. Clair's season here was off to a fast start. The Condors have started back to back home games in a win (one of which was an exhibition match against Fitchburg College).

On Sept. 16, the team traveled to Kalamazoo to play against Lambda College and came away with a 1-1 victory.

Although going down 1-0, St. Clair's full defense was one of the many improvements while in play it that kept the edge of the goalkeeper's face just above the ball's path to make the save.

The second goal was a similar incident as St. Clair left the door but was stopped. However, it was a header from a St. Clair player that was the goal.

The Condors' second win of the season came Oct. 4 at home against St. Clair College — a score 2-1 victory.
